Fund Manager's Comment

The CIF's return for 2022 was 7.02%, compared to 4.79% in 2021 This represented 55.94% of the benchmark rate (12.55%) despite the challenging macro-economic environment. Against the backdrop of accelerating inflation, the Monetary Policy Committee took a hawkish stance in the year under review, delivering a 500bps hike to the benchmark rate (to 16.50%), while the cash reserve ratio was increased to 32.50% from 27.50%. However, failure of the committee's decision to soak the excess financial system liquidity led to the marginal drop in local bond yield and money market rate. Hence, we increased our exposure to fixed deposit (FD) and went mid-long to lock-in good rate.

Strategy

We expect the financial system to be a washed with liquidity in the first four months of the year – on the back of maturing bonds, OMO, T-bills, and coupon payments. This is expected to shrink yields and money market rates. Thus, given the disparity between the policy rate and other market rates, we expect a bit of volatility in the fixed income space – hence, creating trading opportunity. On the one hand, we will cautiously explore trading opportunity at the mid-end of the FGN Bonds if rate surprises upward. On the other hand, we will be on the lookout for opportunity to exit some of our positions in longer-dated instruments when rate crashes below our purchase yield. Meanwhile, we will play more in the money market space and go long to lock-in good rates.
